

HOUSE Responsibilities

Total Life House Responsibilities

As a participant in the Total Life Project, you are afforded certain individual rights that your housemates and staff should respect. However, with these rights come responsibilities. When you follow the house rules listed below and embrace the Total Life Project values, you will make this a great place to live, work and learn!

1. Your suite is your private place. You are responsible for all of your belongings in your suite.
2. You are responsible for locking your suite and the house when you leave.
3. You are responsible for cleaning any dishes or household items that you use in the common areas.
4. You are responsible for cleaning up after yourself in the common areas.
5. You are responsible for using all house furniture, equipment and materials appropriately and with respect.
6. You are responsible for informing the Total Life staff when household items need to be refilled or replaced.
7. You are responsible for your guests and any mess or damage that is created by your guests. Guests must remain with you when in the common areas. No overnight guests.
8. You will respect your fellow housemates and staff as well as their property.
9. You are responsible for completing your weekly household chores on your assigned day.
10. You are responsible for informing housemates and staff regarding your daily and evening schedules. This is as a courtesy to those who live with you and for your safety.
11. You are expected to comply with all state and federal laws, including those pertaining to drugs and alcohol.
12. The Total Life House is a smoke-free environment.
