Lincoln Exhibition in the Hugh M. Morris Library

Each year, in commemoration of the birth of Abraham Lincoln, February 12, 1809, the Special Collections Department of the University of Delaware Library mounts a new display of items from the Lincoln Collection of the Lincoln Club of Delaware in the Lincoln Exhibit Case in the Morris Library on the Newark campus. This year's exhibition will open on February 7, 2006 and will present materials from the Lincoln Collection relating to Abraham Lincoln and Civil Liberties in Wartime. The Civil War brought a number of civil liberties issues to the fore and President Lincoln made controversial decisions which at times polarized the nation. During his presidency Abraham Lincoln was responsible for suspending the writ of habeas corpus without congressional approval as well as issuing the Emancipation Proclamation and these actions brought him praise and criticism. The exhibition will display primary documents from the period, visual materials, publications, and other materials relating to these issues. The exhibition will remain on view through December 15, 2006, and can be viewed during the University of Delaware Library regular hours of operation. For additional information contact Special Collections, University of Delaware Library, phone (302) 831-2229.
