

Dr. Allan Wolfe Levy

I am a semi retired physician, born, raised and educated in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Most of my medical career has been dedicated to the practice of pathology in Wilmington, Delaware. My wife and I raised our two daughters here in Delaware. We have three grandsons who also live nearby.

I am an avid reader and have thoroughly enjoyed the MALS program having been given the opportunity to revisit my passion to learn, especially in the areas of history and literature. As a biology major in undergraduate school these areas of concentration could not be thoroughly pursued because of many science requirements. Now I get to read and discuss many topics along with enjoying my other hobbies of boating and biking.

The administrative staff and professors of the MALS program at the University of Delaware are to be congratulated for providing this outstanding educational opportunity.
