

MALS student Ben Aaron, who's about to graduate, is inviting the MALS community to a screening of his MALS project: a 40-minute documentary film about a local woman who, although she's employed, can't afford a home. Details appear below. You are warmly welcome to join us for the film, refreshments, and good conversation.

The University of Delaware Master of Arts in Liberal Studies Program and the University of Delaware Anthropology Department invite you to join us for an exclusive premier event...

What: The World Premier of Ben Aaron's New Documentary Film, Home

When: Wednesday, April 15th, 7pm

Where: Room 117 Gore Hall

Light refreshments will be served following the one hour program.

Home, Ben's creative MALS project, gives viewers a glimpse into a day in the life of a 31-year-old mother of six who has a job but doesn't have a home. Through footage of daily life as well as reflective interviews, the documentary explores the constant struggle of dealing with the everyday challenges of life while also coping with the physical and mental challenges of living in a homeless shelter. The result is a revealing film that shatters the stereotype of what it means to be homeless. We are all the same - rich or poor - we feel sorrow, we feel joy, and together, we share the power to make a difference.
