UAA's 34th ANNUAL MEETING: WASHINGTON, DC!

By Hal Wolman and Sue Smock

The 34th annual UAA meeting will be a pathbreaker in several ways. First, this will be the first time the UAA will meet in Washington, DC. Our Washington location will serve as an excellent venue for the conference theme, "Context Matters: Shaping Urban Policy Locally, Nationally, and Internationally," since it will provide us with the opportunity to explore urban issues in a national and international context and to focus on the city of Washington itself. Washington, DC is a city of both wealth and poverty, diverse, but also segregated, dominated by the federal government, but also a "hidden city" with many vibrant neighborhoods, substantial gentrification, but also significant areas of concentrated poverty. It also has a set of political institutions that may be unique among American cities (in terms of oversight by the US Congress despite the stunning fact that residents of Washington, DC, unlike other US citizens, have no representation in Congress).

The second break from precedence is that the conference will be co-hosted by several institutions that reflect Washington's unique role in the world of urban academic programs, research, and foundations: The Fannie Mae Foundation, The George Washington University Institute for Public Policy, The Urban Institution, and The Brookings Institution. We intend to take advantage of the resources of the co-hosts through holding two plenary sessions that we believe will generate widespread interest among conference attendees. The Thursday afternoon plenary session, which will be held at the Urban Institute, will feature a panel discussion on city conditions and national policy. Panelists will include Bob Reischauer, President of the Urban Institute, Bruce Katz, Director of The Center for Urban and Metropolitan Policy at the Brookings Institution, and Alice Rivlin, Director of the Greater Washington Research Center, also at Brookings. Bill Barnes, Director of Research at the National League of Cities will serve as moderator.

The Thursday evening reception will be held on the campus of the George Washington University at the Marvin Center. The Urban Institute is a short one block walk from the Washington Marriott Hotel, the site of the conference, and the GW Marvin Center is only five blocks away.

The Friday plenary will provide an international dimension by examining racial and economic (class) spatial segregation in the United States and other developed nations. Is it true that racial and class segregation is more prevalent in US cities than elsewhere? If so, why is this the case and with what consequences? How serious are these problems in other developed nations. The panel will consist of Paul Jargowsky of the University of Texas-Dallas, Xavier Briggs of Harvard University, and Sako Musterd of the University of Amsterdam. It will be moderated by Margery Turner, Director of the Urban Institute's Metropolitan Housing and Community Policy Center.

The Washington area location also provides an excellent setting for Saturday afternoon organized tours. Anyone familiar with this area recognizes the richness and, therefore the difficulty in selecting specific sites for UAA participants; there are so many.

Letter from the Chair

Dear UAA members and friends,

The 2003-04 Governing Board has been faced with a number of significant issues for the future of the UAA. In brief, here is a recap of the last 6 months' work.

Personnel: Immediately following our highly successful Annual Meeting in Cleveland, the Executive Director, David Maola, resigned. Fortunately for UAA, David's assistant, Tanya Tilghman, was able to increase her time commitment to UAA, and the Governing Board created the new position of Managing Director, which Tanya now fills. Tanya also hired Pete Zachary to help with the routine workload and to provide technical support, so the office is now fully staffed.

2004 Program: The 2004 Annual Meeting (31 March – 3 April) will be an exciting one, especially because of its location in Washington, DC. The Program and Local Arrangements committees have worked diligently to combine our traditional UAA topics and presenters with some special sessions that take advantage of the important policy-oriented groups headquartered in DC. In particular, we are collaborating with the Urban Institute and the Brookings Institution to draw upon a broader knowledge base and group of scholars. Many thanks to the Fannie Mae Foundation for their longstanding support; Margaret Wilder as chair of the Program Committee and Hal Wolman as Local Arrangements Chair for their heroic efforts in trying to fit all of the square pegs into round holes!

City Futures International Conference: This event, which UAA and the European Urban Research Association (EURA) are co-sponsoring, takes place in Chicago on 8-10 July 2004. Organized by the College of Urban Planning and Public Affairs at UIC (and at no cost to the UAA) the conference has attracted abstracts from urban scholars across the globe. The signs are that this will be a rather special international gathering and thanks go to Robin Hambleton and Janet Smith for leading this effort to build links between members of UAA and urban researchers in other continents.

Preparing for the Future: At its September meeting, the Governing Board reaffirmed its decision of last year to issue Requests for Proposals to host the Executive Office of UAA and the Journal of Urban Affairs, effective July 1, 2005. There will be a two-stage process whereby a letter of intent will be due by February 1, 2004 and formal bids will be due July 1, 2004. Interested parties will have time at the Annual Meeting to discuss the process and criteria for selection with the search committees. The Governing Board assures the membership that the current hosts, University of Delaware and St. Louis University, continue to provide excellent service to the organization. The reason for the bid process is not due to dissatisfaction with current arrangements but to the interest some institutional members have expressed in opening up the process to multiple bidders. Expect to see the RFPs in December.

So the first 6 months of our tenure have been busy and rewarding. The Association is in good health, and we value your membership! I am looking forward to seeing you in Washington!

Nancy Kleniewski

Current plans include the following tours:

Architectural Tour in Washington, D.C. Washington D.C. presents a broad array of architectural styles; some representing its southern history, some typical new growth and always aware of the planned (and unplanned) U.S. government buildings--styles and politics. Certainly, this is a unique American city of architecture mixing 19th century urban planning with decisions by politicians and land developers. This tour will select some of the interesting examples of D.C. architecture for participants to view.

The Arlington County Transit Corridor: What a Well-Planned Transit Corridor Looks Like! EPA calls it the best example of a smart growth community in the nation. The Urban Land Institute gave it only its second Award for Excellence for a local government. It is considered the quintessential example of transportation oriented development in action today in the country. What is it? It is Arlington, Virginia. Ride the train to Arlington and join Virginia Tech faculty along with Arlington staff on a tour of the heart of Arlington's transit corridor. Learn what Arlington did, how it did it, why it did it, and where it is headed. (Please note this tour is pending at press time.)

DC Neighborhoods in Transition: Challenges of Revitalization from a Community Perspective. This walking tour through the diverse and dynamic neighborhoods of Columbia Heights and Shaw in northwest DC will be led by Reverend Jim Dickerson, a long-time community activist, who will describe the dramatic changes underway and discuss the challenges they present for residents seeking to preserve affordable housing and neighborhood diversity. Participants will be bussed to the neighborhood where there will be a 1.5–2 hour walking tour on a lovely (hopefully) spring day in D.C.

Revitalizing Urban Communities: A Study of Silver Spring and Wheaton, MD. Montgomery County, Maryland is an incubator for innovative planning and smart growth implementation. As such, it is an excellent place to visit and experience. This tour will focus on how strong county leadership can encourage the extensive revitalization of urban areas by studying Silver Spring and Wheaton in Montgomery County, MD. In order to demonstrate the County's commitment to Silver Spring, County Executive, Doug Duncan created a Redevelopment Office responsible for encouraging the redevelopment of Silver Spring by providing superior and transparent, county services. The Silver Spring portion of the tour will be guided by Gary Stith, Director of the Silver Spring Regional Services Center and Bryant Foulger, Foulger Pratt Development. Utilizing many of the revitalization components and strategies that were successful in Silver Spring, the County established a Redevelopment Program in downtown Wheaton 3 1/2 years ago. The Wheaton portion of the tour will be guided by Bob Fischer, Acting Director of the Wheaton Redevelopment Program. Mr. Fischer will be joined by Toby Millman, Eakin/Youngentob Development.

A Boat Tour of the Anacostia Waterfront. The Anacostia waterfront represents the single largest revitalization opportunity for Washington D.C. and is one of Mayor Anthony A. Williams' top priorities and greatest passions. As the city is currently in a period of explosive growth and looks to a future of adding 100,000 people, expanding employment for its residents, confronting the widening divide between rich and poor and strengthening its competitiveness as a global city, the Anacostia Waterfront Initiative (AWI) offers the greatest and possibly last prospect for achieving these ambitious goals. The tour, led by Andrew Altman, director of the D.C. Office of Planning, will take participants on a boat to see and hear about how AWI is bringing together the city, federal government, private sector, foundations and numerous communities in one of the most ambitious and comprehensive urban revitalization initiatives in the country, encompassing 2800 acres of land, 7 miles of shoreline and over 40 neighborhoods, some of which are the most economically-distressed in the city. The tour will highlight new Hope VI neighborhoods, the role of the expanding Navy Yard, areas where new parks are being built and environmental restoration is occurring and an innovative city/federal partnership to redevelop federal land into a new neighborhood for the city. Participants will hear how the city is using the Anacostia as a strategy for re-making the city, the community process the city undertook, the challenges and partnerships developed with the federal government and how development of the waterfront is being linked as an “equity” strategy to bring resources and opportunity to distressed east of the river neighborhoods.

Duke Ellington's DC: A tour of A Historic African-American Neighborhood. This tour, developed by Cultural Tourism DC, provides an historical and contemporary insider's perspective on what was once and is now once again one of the hottest neighborhoods and entertainment districts in Washington, DC: the area surrounding U Street, NW. The four-hour bus tour takes participants back to the heyday of the music and culture scene of Washington, DC, back to a time when U Street was known as the Black Broadway. U Street is the center of the Shaw neighborhood, a historic African American community with a prosperous middle class dating from the early 1900s, a center of the Civil Rights movement and a focal point for the 1968 riots. Now considered a poster-child example of gentrification in Washington DC, this tour provides a rare opportunity to encounter the continuing evolution of a truly unique neighborhood, one that demonstrates the myriad and changing social and economic relationships of urban America over the past 100+ years. Landmarks along the way include the Lincoln Theatre, jewel of the U Street arts, the Thurgood Marshall Center for Heritage and Service which was home of the nation's first black YMCA, and the African American Civil War Memorial, the only monument of its kind in the country.

About the Hotel

Emerging Scholar Award – Call for Nominations

Sage Publications and the Urban Affairs Association are pleased to announce the opening of nominations for the 2004 Emerging Scholars Award, an annual award for emerging scholars whose work exemplifies commitment to research on significant urban issues. The award is designed to recognize and encourage outstanding scholarship in urban affairs.

The 2004 Emerging Scholars Award will be presented at the Annual Meeting of the Urban Affairs Association March 31-April 3, 2004 in Washington, D.C. The recipient will receive a $1,000 honorarium, a plaque and a complimentary registration to the Annual Meeting.

Eligibility. Students pursuing doctoral research in urban affairs, regardless of academic discipline, are eligible to apply. Applicants must have finished their coursework, passed their comprehensive examinations, and have an approved dissertation proposal.

Nomination. Students must be nominated by a current member of the Urban Affairs Association.

Application. Application for the award consists of three (3) copies of the following items:

- A nomination letter from a current UAA member. This letter must attest that the student has an approved dissertation topic, has completed coursework, and has passed comprehensive examinations. If the nominating UAA member is not familiar with the student's dissertation research, the application should include an additional letter of support from a faculty member who can speak to the nature and quality of the dissertation scholarship. Nomination/support letters should be confidential (that is, provided in a sealed envelope, signed across the flap).

- A two- to three-page personal statement by the applicant describing the applicant's urban interests, engagement, and career plans.
- A curriculum vitae or a resume.
- A six- to eight-page prospectus for the dissertation that indicates the research questions, argument or hypotheses, literature and data sources, methodology, and nature of expected findings.

Deadlines. Complete applications (in hardcopy; no e-mail applications accepted) must be received at the UAA office by January 9, 2004. The award will be given at the Annual Meeting of the Urban Affairs Association, March 31-April 3, 2004 in Washington, D.C.

Procedures. The applications will be reviewed by a committee of three persons appointed by the UAA Governing Board. The winner will be selected based on scholarship and commitment to urban issues. The awards committee will report its decision directly to the UAA Governing Board.

The application should be mailed to:
 Emerging Scholars Award Committee
 Urban Affairs Association
 298 Graham Hall
 University of Delaware
 Newark, DE 19716

Further inquiries should be directed to Prof. Kathryn A. Foster, Chair, UAA Emerging Scholars Award Committee (phone: 716-829-2133, ext. 109; e-mail: kafoster@ap.buffalo.edu) or to UAA's executive director, Tanya Tilghman (phone: 302-831-1681; e-mail: uaa@udel.edu).

City Futures International Conference – July 8 – 10, 2004

This conference involves collaboration between the UAA and our counterpart in Europe - the European Urban Research Association (EURA). Organized by Robin Hambleton, Janet Smith and colleagues at the College of Urban Planning and Public Affairs at the University of Illinois at Chicago the conference has attracted a very high level of international interest. Over 220 abstracts have been received from a total of 41 different countries. An International Conference Organizing Committee, comprising members of the UAA and EURA, is now working on the detailed planning and preparation for what promises to be a very successful international gathering. There will be three comparative tracks: 1) Comparative urban analysis, 2) Comparative urban planning and 3) Comparative city governance. It is hoped that some of the papers can feed into future issues of the Journal of Urban Affairs. The closing date for abstracts has now passed. For more information please visit: www.uic.edu/cuppa/cityfutures.

Positions Available

Urban Affairs publishes current job openings as submitted by members on the UAA website and in the quarterly newsletters. Non-members may place a job posting for a one-time fee of $175. To see most current position openings, visit www.udel.edu/uaa/jobs.html.

University of North Carolina at Charlotte Department of Geography and Earth Sciences

The University of North Carolina at Charlotte, Department of Geography and Earth Sciences is recruiting an outstanding candidate for the Knight Professor of Public Policy to begin in the Fall term, 2004. The successful candidate will have a distinguished research record including publications and funded research, graduate teaching and mentorship credentials, and the ability to work with colleagues from several academic departments and the community. The Department seeks a scholar with focus in the area of urban, regional, or environmental policy. The appointee will be expected to teach three courses per year, conduct funded research, and direct doctoral students.

The successful candidate will be a core faculty member in the interdisciplinary Ph.D. in Public Policy, which began in the Fall of 2001 and currently has more than 25 students. The appointee must have experience and credentials commensurate with the rank of Professor in the Department of Geography and Earth Sciences. The Knight Distinguished Professorship and the endowment derivatives are for an initial term of five years, renewable for additional terms.

Review of applications will begin January 1, 2004 and continue until the position is filled. Send: 1) letter of application stating primary teaching and research interests, 2) vita, 3) three references to the address given below. Finalists may be asked to send additional materials at a later date. AA/EOE

Applications may be sent to:

Dr. Owen J. Furuseth
Associate Provost
Metropolitan Studies & Extended Academic Programs
The University of North Carolina at Charlotte
9201 University City Blvd.
Charlotte, NC 28223-0001

Rutgers University-Newark

The Joseph C. Cornwall Center for Metropolitan Studies

Rutgers-Newark invites applications and nominations for the position of Director of the Joseph C. Cornwall Center for Metropolitan Studies. The Center, established in 2000 with a substantial endowment from The Fund for New Jersey, plays a crucial role in the academic life of this urban research university.

The Center undertakes applied research and public policy analysis on urban issues with a particular emphasis on Newark and the northern New Jersey metropolitan region. It also supports basic scholarly research, seminars and conferences for faculty in many fields on urban subjects. And it conducts an active program of community outreach. The Center moved to offices in a newly constructed townhouse on the Newark campus in January 2003. More information on the Center is available at its website, www.cornwall.rutgers.edu.

The Center director must have a substantial record of research on cities, metropolitan areas and urban policy; extensive experience in managing applied urban research; and must work successfully with scholars in a wide variety of disciplines and with governmental, community and foundation leaders. Ability to secure external funding for Center projects is essential. The Center's director will have the opportunity to play a significant role in Newark's continuing revitalization and to contribute substantially to Rutgers-Newark's mission as an urban research university. Salary and benefits are highly competitive. A candidate with an appropriate scholarly record can also be appointed to a faculty position in one of the departments or schools of the campus.

Applications, including a cover letter, a curriculum vita, and the names, addresses and telephone numbers of at least five references should be sent to:

Professor Marc Holzer, Chair
Cornwall Center Director Search Committee
Office of the Provost, Rutgers University
123 Washington Street, Newark, New Jersey 07102-3094

The committee will begin reviewing candidates on October 14 and will continue until the position is filled. Rutgers-Newark is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

Minnesota State University Mankato

Urban & Regional Studies Institute

The Urban & Regional Studies Institute at Minnesota State University Mankato is recruiting for a tenure-track faculty position at the assistant professor level beginning August, 2004. Successful candidates must hold a terminal degree in urban studies or a related area. The successful candidate will be committed to active, applied learning and to fostering community in a diverse and pluralistic society. A full listing of responsibilities and qualifications is available at <http://mnsu.edu/humanres/employment.html>.

URSI offers undergraduate and graduate programs that will prepare quality theorists, local government professionals, and community leaders. The program combines theory and practice to arrive at "informed action" in urban and regional affairs. Our alumni are found as planners and managers in almost every city in Minnesota and throughout the US.

We are located in a community recognized as one of the outstanding "micropolitan communities" in the US, 80 miles from Minneapolis. Currently, 25 languages are spoken in homes in the school district.

Initial review of applications will begin January 7, 2004 and will continue until the position is filled. Applicants should submit a cover letter, curriculum vitae, unofficial transcripts, statement of philosophy of teaching and teaching interest, statement of scholarly interests and plans, and the names, e-mail addresses and telephone numbers of three references to:

Tony Filipovitch, Chair
URSI Search Committee
Minnesota State University Mankato
106 Morris Hall
Mankato MN 56001
(507) 389-1714
TTY: (800) 627-3529
Fax: (507) 389-6377
e-mail: Tony@mnsu.edu

AA/EOE, Member of Minnesota State Colleges and Universities System.

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Department of City and Regional Planning

The Department of City and Regional Planning at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill invites applications for a tenure-track position at the assistant professor level, effective July 1, 2004. The department seeks a well-trained scholar and capable teacher with an ambitious research agenda and active research program. This research should have strong potential to attract external funding that leads to student support and publications. A PhD in planning or in related social/natural science fields is preferred. Candidates expecting imminent conferral of a PhD may also apply.

We are seeking candidates with expertise in community development and/or economic development as the first priority or in transportation or land use planning. Successful candidates are expected to mentor PhD students and contribute to the curricula at the MRP, PhD and undergraduate levels.

The department currently has over 100 full time graduate students in the MRP and PhD programs and undergraduates pursuing the minor in Urban Studies and Planning. The 15 permanent faculty members are known for their scholarship, research productivity, and extensive contributions to planning practice. Over its 57-year history, the department has established a distinguished tradition of training professional planners in the MRP program and developing future scholars in its PhD program.

The MRP program offers ten specializations within the areas of community development, economic development, environmental planning, land use planning and transportation planning. The department has dual degree programs and/or strong ties with graduate programs in business, geography, international development, law, public administration, public health and public policy at UNC-CH as well as graduate design, engineering and environmental management programs at North Carolina State University and Duke University. See www.planning.unc.edu

UNC-CH is an equal opportunity employer, and the department is strongly committed to increasing the diversity of its faculty. Women and minorities are especially encouraged to apply.

Candidates should prepare a letter of interest, resume, and a list of four references. If requested, they should arrange to have their four reference letters submitted by the end of January 2004. Materials should be sent to:

Emil Malizia
Chair
Department of City and Regional Planning
University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
Campus Box 3140
Chapel Hill, NC 27599-3140

Screening of applicants will begin December 15, 2003 and continue until the position is filled.

Book Award: "Cities in the International Marketplace: The Political Economy of Urban Development in North America and Western Europe" by Hank Savitch and Paul Kantor was named the Best Book in Urban Politics for 2003 by the Urban Politics Section of the American Political Science Association.

Robert Beauregard recently published two books. One is the second edition of his Voices of Decline: The Postwar Fate of U.S. Cities (Routledge, 2003). In it, he explores the history of the public discourse on distressed cities with particular attention to issues of race and representation. The second is the co-edited Emerging Johannesburg: Perspectives on the Post-Apartheid City (Routledge, 2003). Its essays reflect on the contrast between the apartheid and post-apartheid city with particular attention to issues of race, class, and space. Various chapters discuss gated communities, residential segregation, grassroots political movements, shopping patterns, crime, redevelopment, and AIDS among others.
